Winter in Ontario just gets worse

Havoc on the roadways.

Nearly 100 cars pile up on highway due to snow squall

A massive wall of snow erased visibility on highways across southern Ontario on Thursday morning, triggering one of the winter's worst multi-car accidents and killing at least one driver.

The biggest pileup occurred when 96 cars were caught in a snow squall on Highway 400 near Barrie around 9 a.m.

Surprisingly, only three people were taken to hospital with minor injuries, OPP confirmed.

"It could have been a lot worse," Sgt. Dave Woodford told the CBC. "People were slowing down."

Officers sawed a metal guardrail to pieces to create a passageway for drivers to leave the crash. Warming buses were on scene as temperatures dropped well below -20 C, while paramedics treated several minor injuries.

No retrial for Rengel's killer

The Ontario Court of Appeal has denied Melissa Todorovic a new trial for the murder of 14-year-old Stefanie Rengel and upheld her adult sentence of life in prison.

Todorovic was 15 when she taunted and sexually blackmailed her 17-year-old boyfriend into stabbing Rengel to death on New Year's Day 2008, a jury found in convicting her of first-degree murder.

Though she was tried as a young offender, trial judge Ian Nordheimer sentenced her as an adult to life in prison, with no parole for seven years, and allowed authorities to monitor her for life.

Her boyfriend, David Bagshaw, was also sentenced as an adult to life in prison.

The corporate sector is stepping forward to keep 11 more outdoor ice rinks open until March 16 to take advantage of the continuing cold weather.

The city closed all but 17 of 53 rinks on schedule last Sunday but members of council lamented the move as the city experiences its coldest winter in 20 years.

Canadian Tire and Scotiabank announced Thursday they are putting up $270,000 to fund the continued operation of 11 rinks until after March break, weather permitting.

Man's death at police hands ruled accidental

Coroner's inquest. Officers mistook Charles McGillivary for another man and tackled him to the ground, triggering cardiac distress

The jury at the coroner's inquest examining the death of Charles McGillivary, who died after being tackled by police in a case of mistaken identity, declared his death an accident on Thursday.

McGillivary, 45, died on Aug. 1, 2011, after two Toronto police officers attempted to arrest him, mistaking him for another man with a similar physical description who had allegedly breached his bail conditions.

Known as "Charlie" and "Lurch," McGillivary was developmentally challenged and hearing impaired. He fought back when police tried to handcuff him while he was walking with his mother, Ann, near Bloor Street and Christie Street.

The six-foot-four, 270-pound McGillivary, who suffered from a pre-existing heart condition, went into distress and was declared dead at Toronto Western Hospital.

The Special Investigations Unit cleared the two officers of any wrongdoing in 2012.

The coroner's inquest began earlier this month. The jury offered eight recommendations to help prevent similar deaths, including equipping police cars with automated external defibrillators (AED), and mouth shields and gloves to facilitate performing CPR and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

CPR was not performed on McGillivary until the paramedics arrived. Raymond Kang, one of the two officers, testified he wasn't sure it was needed.

The five jurors also want guidance for police to know if a person is not communicating due to a medical or cognitive disability.

Toronto police spokesman Mark Pugash, speaking on behalf of Deputy Chief Mike Federico, who appeared at the inquest, said police will look at the recommendations closely and "implement wherever it's reasonable to do so."

Ford Bros. go after Chief Blair ... again

Accusations. RoFo & Co. say chief broke law, wasted money

Mayor Rob Ford
TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Mayor Rob Ford and Councillor Doug Ford have renewed and sharply escalated their unprecedented public attack on the integrity of Toronto's chief of police, explicitly accusing Bill Blair of violating police law and meddling in the mayoral election in support of John Tory.

Doug Ford, alleging a pro-Tory conspiracy, claimed Thursday that Blair has gone "rogue" and violated the Police Services Act by commenting on the mayor while he is under investigation.

Rob Ford said Blair "owes an apology to the taxpayers" for spending money probing his activities and uncovering "nothing." Ford said he would not apologize for calling Blair an obscene name in a profane Jamaican-accented rant filmed at an Etobicoke restaurant in January.

"If he's going to arrest me, arrest me," Ford said at city hall. "I have done nothing wrong. And he's wasted millions of dollars. I want him to come clean and say how much money did it cost the taxpayers for surveillance on me, and the planes that he had to rent. That is absolutely game-playing. It's politics. And I am not apologizing."

The Fords campaigned in 2010 as strong supporters of the police. They embark on the 2014 campaign while locked in a never-before-seen rhetorical firefight with the chief.

Their Thursday comments, swiftly denounced by Tory as a "disgrace," came a day after Blair made unusual remarks of his own. He told the Star that Rob Ford's friend Sandro Lisi had warned police upon his Oct. 31 extortion arrest that Doug Ford would soon launch an offensive against their "boss."

Blair also complained that his family was subjected to Rob Ford's "disgusting" insult, "c—sucker."

Rob Ford responded: "He's embarrassed? How about him embarrassing my family, my kids, my community, my friends, following me around for five months, spending millions of dollars, using taxpayers' money, trying to politicize things?" TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Who's got the look?

Sleeve length matters, strong lines project confidence and messy is not a look: Image consultant critiques Toronto's mayoral candidates — from head to toe

JESSICA SMITH CROSS
jessica.smithcross@metronews.ca

If you close your eyes and picture Rob Ford, you'll probably see him in a football jersey or a suit with a sweat-stained shirt and novelty tie.

Does that make you more or less likely to vote for him? Does it make him look like the everyman he says he is, or a politically connected member of the one per cent?

Image consultants, such as Diane Craig, say image matters, even when politicians don't want it too. A reluctant Preston Manning wrote in his autobiography about taking Craig's image advice before the 1997 election, to keep voters from being distracted from his message by his "voice, hair, spectacles, smile and clothes."

"For a politician, it's very important that they know how to dress to the audience they're speaking to," she said. "You have to think, who am I speaking to today and what is the image I want to project."

As for Ford, a recent profile of him in Esquire suggests he, too, has had a little helpful advice about his image.

"Trying to clean up before the big (2010) campaign, the mayor-to-be had sprung for some high-end tailored men's wear," the magazine reported. "But a senior Canadian conservative politician, as yet unnamed, called Doug Ford and told him to get his brother out of those f—ing suits and back into his novelty ties. It was important that he look like the outside, not the in."

Here is Craig's opinion on the personal styles of four front-running candidates for the mayor's office, and one who's undeclared as-of-yet.

Rob Ford

"Most of the time he looks very dishevelled," image consultant Diane Craig said. "And it's not about being overweight. If you look at the governor of New Jersey (Chris Christie), he never looks dishevelled."

Ford wears jerseys to "enhance his likeability factor and appear more of a man of the people," she said, adding an unnamed Canadian conservative politician (see intro) probably gave bad advice if it led to his dishevelled-in-a-suit look, because it makes him look messy and sends the message that anything he'd touch would be a mess.

"If Ford thinks looking dishevelled makes him look like one of the people, I'm not sure it is because there are people who have money and know how to dress, and people who have money and don't know how to dress," she said.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

John Tory

Craig said she considers both John Tory and Ford members of the elite, despite their different looks.

"He's usually polished and well-groomed," she said of Tory. "He looks like a gentleman."

Craig wouldn't suggest he change that to counter attacks from Ford's camp that he's a member of the "one per cent."

Tory often wears a shirt open at the collar with a business suit, which makes the people who'd like to see him wear a suit happy, but also allows him to look a little relaxed at the same time Craig said.

"It's appearing more casual, at ease, not stuffy and trying to dress down the formal suit," she said.

THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Olivia Chow

Olivia Chow hasn't registered to run for mayor yet, but if she does she's already projected a confident image, said Craig.

Chow favours bright colours and strong lines.

"I find she dresses very confidently," Craig said. "It isn't normally over-the-top and it's in good taste. She wears her skirts on the shorter side, and it's probably because she's so fit."

Chow wrote about being style-conscious in her memoir, My Journey. She wrote that she used her background in art to craft her husband's wardrobe, creating a set of "tie principles" for Jack Layton to follow that included wearing a dark blue shirt to match a light yellow or green tie, not wearing light suits in winter, wearing brown in rural areas and leaving the bold, purple and dark pink ties for urban centres.

THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Karen Stintz

Stintz generally looks presentable and safe, said Craig.

"She's got a nice suit, the length of the skirt is good, the sleeve length is good, the shirt she's wearing compliments her suit well, she's got a simple pump," she said. "She's certainly not controversial. It's a safe look."

Stintz's image on the day she registered came from more than just her clothes, because she brought her kids along and forgot her identification, Craig said. "It told me she's a mom juggling many things and maybe wants to appeal to the female vote, perhaps."

Stintz is likely aware of how image works in politics, said Craig, recalling the news stories from 2009 about Stintz taking voice coaching.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

David Soknacki

While Soknacki sports the same open-collar-in-a-suit look as John Tory, he tends to look "like paper-pusher bureaucrat," said Craig. "It's not the polish of John Tory, if you will."

She said the suit he wore to city hall to register as a candidate appeared a bit long in the sleeve and his hair needed "cleaning up a bit."

The look may fit Soknacki, the city's former budget chief, who has launched a policy-focused campaign that includes the slogan "Never Heard Of Me? Neither Has Jimmy Kimmel."

According to the National Post, he also has a fedora that his campaign won't let him wear in front of the press.

Apparently expressing frustration over image-related criticism, he tweeted Thursday, "So, new suits, no fedora, new language, wear ties, new campaign colors, now a font czar ... and people want authenticity?"

Business owner fighting Quebec language law in Facebook fracas

TREVOR GREENWAY/METRO IN OTTAWA

A business owner is fighting Quebec's tough language laws after she was ordered to translate her company Facebook page into French.

Eva Cooper, owner of Delilah in the Parc, in Chelsea, Que., received a letter from Quebec's language cops claiming that she had violated section 52 of Bill 101 and that she must translate the page into French to comply with the law. Cooper said the reaches of Bill 101 have stretched too far and she's ready to fight.

"I am not going to take this lying down. It's about all of us," said Cooper from her Delilah in the Glebe location in Ottawa.

"This isn't pornography, this isn't hate mail, this isn't blackmail, I mean there is nothing bad about what we are doing," she said. "Isn't it a form of communication?"

Cooper has until March 10 to respond to the letter, or she could face legal action.

Bus killer unescorted

Vince Li. Board grants man who beheaded fellow passenger on Greyhound freedom to travel to nearby town without supervision

A man who beheaded a fellow passenger on a Greyhound bus in Manitoba will soon be allowed to leave a mental hospital without an escort.

Thursday's ruling by the Criminal Code Review Board means Vince Li will be on his own in public for the first time since he stabbed Tim McLean and then ate parts of his body six years ago.

The board granted Li all the new freedoms his psychiatric team had requested at a hearing earlier this week. Lead psychiatrist Dr. Steven Kremer said Li, a schizophrenic, has stopped experiencing delusions and is a non-violent patient.

Instead of the supervised outings Li had been granted previously, he will be allowed unescorted trips from the Selkirk Mental Health Centre into the nearby city of Selkirk. The visits, to begin next Thursday, are to start at 30 minutes and increase to full days.

As well, Li's supervision on outings to other communities — including Winnipeg — will be relaxed. He is to be part of a group without a staff member dedicated to monitoring him.

Li is also to be moved to an unlocked ward at the hospital from the secure wing where he has been kept.

For McLean's mother, the changes were an outrage.

"He poses no threat in care. I propose they keep him in care so he's not a threat."

Carol DeDelley, mother of victim Tim McLean, who says there is no way to guarantee that Vince Li will continue to take his medication if he's unsupervised

DeDelley said.

"I ultimately do not believe that when you take a life, you have the right to freedom any longer."

Li, 46, was found not criminally responsible for stabbing and beheading McLean, a young carnival worker, in July 2008.

The two men were strangers when Li sat next to McLean on a bus ride to Winnipeg from Edmonton. Li's attack was unprovoked — he said he heard voices telling him to kill McLean. The bus stopped and horrified passengers fled as Li carved up McLean's body.

Li was initially kept inside a locked wing of the Selkirk mental hospital for 24 hours a day. Each year the review board has granted him more freedoms.

Crown attorney Susan Helenchilde did not oppose the changes proposed at this year's hearing. She noted that Li has co-operated with hospital staff at all times.

Li's doctors said he willingly takes his medication and understands the importance of doing so.

DeDelley is not convinced. She said there is no way to guarantee that Li will continue to take his drugs if he's unsupervised. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two charged with murdering Halifax student

Loretta Saunders was killed two weeks ago at a Halifax apartment she once shared with two roommates, police said Thursday as they charged the pair with first-degree murder.

Supt. Jim Perrin of Halifax Regional Police said investigators believe the 26-year-old student was slain on Feb. 13, the day she was last seen.

Perrin wouldn't give any details of how she died.

Victoria Henneberry, 28, and Blake Leggette, 25, are scheduled to face the allegations in Halifax provincial court Friday.

Perrin said Henneberry and Leggette were in a relationship and they once shared the apartment with Saunders. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The TTC's most recent Customer Satisfaction Survey reveals a general, year-over-year improvement in how our customers perceive us. And that's encouraging, especially as many of the areas that show strong improvement are those where we have applied intense management focus, such as improving the cleanliness of stations and vehicles.

One area that you tell us you want to see further improvement is the timeliness and quality of the information we provide. Our recently released 2014 Customer Charter contains time-bound promises to take material steps to address this need.

Next week, we will begin a trial of new signs (called wayfinding) at Bloor-Yonge Station, as part of a drive to make getting around our subway stations easier. The system will feature new line numbers to identify subway routes, simplified messaging on signage, and better identification of barrier-free pathways through the station.

In a few weeks, we will introduce similar new signs to St George Station. We have deliberately chosen our busiest stations for these trials. More on this next week.

Being more informative is a key commitment that we are making in 2014. By the end of this year, we will have installed 60 more digital customer information displays to provide at-a-glance, real-time service details at locations across the TTC. Public address speakers will be upgraded at a number of our subway stations so that announcements are audible and understood. As well, we will continue to produce a range of videos to keep you informed about activities and operations at the TTC.

Finally, we have started the process of commissioning a modern communications network for our buses and streetcars. Once installed, we will be able to directly provide customers with timely and relevant service information that may affect your journey. This technology is something that we have needed for a long time, and I am pleased that we have secured the funding to finally take this big step forward on our quest to keep you better informed throughout your time with us.

Canada's first subway cars arrived from England in 1953 and began service in 1954. They were retired in 1990.

EMPLOYEE PROFILE

The job makes me smile when I see children coming with their parents to pay at the booth. I'm proud to work at TTC because it's a part of people's lives. People depend on the TTC to go to work, to attend festivals and simply to get around the city. Also, it helps that the team I work with are all really amazing. We're like a family.

Same-sex marriage.
Kentucky the latest win for gay rights advocates

A federal judge signed an order Thursday directing officials in Kentucky to immediately recognize same-sex marriages performed in other states and countries, capping a hectic 24 hours in the battle over gay rights that is raging across the U.S.

The Kentucky decision was just the latest victory for gay rights advocates.

A federal judge on Wednesday declared a same-sex marriage ban in deeply conservative Texas unconstitutional, handing same-sex marriage proponents their biggest victory yet — pending an appeal that will likely go to the U.S. Supreme Court.

It followed similar recent decisions in Utah, Oklahoma and Virginia.

Kentucky's ruling Thursday only requires the state to recognize the marriages of gay and lesbian couples performed in other states or countries.

Rehearsal for invasion?

North Korea launches missiles in protest, say officials

North Korea fired four suspected short-range missiles into its eastern waters Thursday, South Korean defence officials said, in an apparent effort to protest ongoing U.S.-South Korean military exercises that Pyongyang calls a rehearsal for invasion.

The launches, however, weren't expected to raise tension as North Korea routinely tests short-range missiles and it has recently sought better ties with South Korea in what outside analysts say is an attempt to win badly-needed foreign investment and aid.

Blow to the bank.
Tensions have caused the country's finances to plummet, prompting a potential emergency financial package

Masked gunmen stormed parliament in Ukraine's strategic Crimea region Thursday as Russian fighter jets scrambled to patrol borders, while the newly formed government pledged to prevent a national breakup with strong backing from the West — the stirrings of a potentially dangerous confrontation reminiscent of Cold War brinksmanship.

Moscow granted shelter to Ukraine's fugitive president, Viktor Yanukovych, state media said. He was said to be holed up in a luxury government retreat and to have scheduled a news conference Friday near the Ukrainian border.

As gunmen wearing unmarked camouflage uniforms erected a sign reading "Crimea is Russia" in the provincial capital, Ukraine's interim prime minister declared the Black Sea territory "has been and will be a part of Ukraine."

The escalating conflict sent Ukraine's finances plummeting further, prompting Western leaders to prepare an emergency financial package.

Yanukovych, whose abandonment of closer ties to Europe in favour of a bailout loan from Russia set off three months of protests, finally fled by helicopter last week as his allies deserted him. The humiliating exit was a severe blow to Russian President Vladimir Putin, who had been celebrating his signature Olympics even as Ukraine's drama came to a head. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Romania's pain — its orphans

Ceausescu-era abuse. Since Romanian orphans came to Canada, Simon Fraser U. has been studying their development

Romanian orphans play without toys at a Bucharest orphanage in 1991. SIUMUI CHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

When the Iron Curtain was torn down almost 25 years ago, the images shocked the world: tens of thousands of Romanian children warehoused in cold, grey institutions, sometimes stacked six to a bed.

Malnourished and ailing, children rocked themselves in silence on thin, threadbare mattresses. Most didn't talk or cry. There was no point. No one was listening.

Bottles were often tied to cribs for babies to feed themselves.

"Nobody held it for them, or fed them or held the child. If the baby could cope with it, good; if not, they got sick and died," says Lucy LeMare, an associate professor at Simon Fraser University, near Vancouver.

Under Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, the number of state orphanages had swelled to more than 600 grossly underfunded institutions. After he was executed by his own people on Christmas Day in 1989, childless western families flooded the country to adopt. Canadian families took in more than 1,400 children from Romania in 1990 and 1991, roughly half of them from orphanages.

The circumstances presented a tragic and unprecedented opportunity to assess the long-term impact of deprivation in early childhood, and Simon Fraser researchers have spent the past two decades studying the adoptees' development.

They surveyed them as toddlers, then twice as school-aged children and again around 17.

They're now beginning a new survey with the hope that, as adults, the former Romanian orphans may be able to shed light on what helped and what hampered their ability to cope with their early trauma.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mental disorders

- The most recent survey, published in 2007, found that about 40 per cent of Romanian adoptees had been diagnosed with a mental disorder, compared with 15 per cent among the general youth population in Canada.

Early abuse scars deep

"When people saw those images after the fall of Ceausescu, they looked at those babies and thought ... I'm going to love that child and everything is going to be OK.' It turns out that that's not always the case."

Lucy LeMare, associate professor at Simon Fraser University

A nation's shame

Carmen's story of survival

She was so tiny in her crib that her soon-to-be-mom thought she was about 18 months old. Actually, she was 4 1/2, but neglect and malnourishment had taken their toll.

"What about this little girl?" Sonya Paterson recalls asking in one of a string of dark rooms in dark orphanages she visited throughout Romania. She was helping hundreds of Canadian and American couples adopt kids from the crumbling state.

"The orphanage director looked at me right in the eyes and said, 'Sonya, that girl's not for you. She's irrecuperable and you should get yourself a baby."' But the fact that Carmen had survived the barren, prison-like orphanage only endeared the bright-eyed little girl to Paterson. She was adopted by her in 1990.

U.K. spied on webcams: NSA leaks

Report. Yahoo calls news British spy agency stealing screenshots of intimate videos 'a whole new level of violation of users privacy' if true

Britain's signals intelligence division is stealing screenshots from hundreds of thousands of innocent Yahoo users' webcam videos, according to the Guardian newspaper, which also reported that the years-long operation has swept up a huge haul of intimate photographs.

The newspaper said GCHQ has been scooping up the sensitive images by intercepting video chats such as the kind offered by Yahoo Messenger, an effort code-named OPTIC NERVE. It's not clear how many Yahoo users were spied on in this way.

The Guardian said the documents were provided by former U.S. intelligence worker Edward Snowden, who remains in Russia after having sought temporary asylum there.

Flying. The 1% get more than mere curtains

Global airlines are increasingly rewarding wealthy fliers with physical distance between them and everyone else.

It's one way that a gap between the world's wealthiest one per cent and everyone else has widened.

Many top-paying passengers, having put down roughly $15,000 US for a ticket, now check in at secluded facilities and are driven in luxury cars directly to planes.

When Emirates Airline opened a new concourse in Dubai last year, it made sure to keep coach passengers separate from those in business and first class. The top floor of the building is for premium passengers with direct boarding to the upstairs of Emirates' fleet of double-decker Airbus A380s. Those in coach wait one storey below and board to the lower level of the plane.

HASHTAG HOPES FOR SPRING

THE METRO LIST

Neil Morton
metronews.ca

1 Piers Morgan. Social media went nuts this week when it was announced CNN was ending Piers Morgan's show next month due to poor ratings. The majority seemed fully in support of the decision to axe the show. I for one find his interview style refreshing and transparent, and his ranting on gun control laws — while tiring to some — bang on. I say move Anderson Cooper into the 9 p.m. slot now.

2 #PinkShirtDay #StopBullying. People standing up to bullies — while wearing pink — was trending across Canada this week in a beautiful show of solidarity against bullying on Pink Shirt Day on Wednesday. Whether it's in the schoolyard, home, workplace or online, we all know someone who has been bullied. The more awareness (and action) on this social issue, the better.

3 Harold Ramis. The world of comedy lost a gem — his writing classics included Animal House and Groundhog Day — when he passed away at the age of 69, and online tributes flowed in. It's his co-starring role in the Ghostbuster movies he'll likely be most remembered for. Indeed, a Twitter picture showing a tribute to him outside the Ghostbusters firehouse in Tribeca (Twinkie included!) was shared all over the interwebs.

4 AC/DC symphony. It's perhaps the best mashup of classical music meets classic rock ever: Croatian string duo 2Cellos did an amazing cover of AC/DC's Thunderstruck, performed in full period setting. It has four million views on YouTube. I want more. I want the 2Cellos to do Stairway to Heaven, Bohemian Rhapsody, Sweet Child O'Mine and Smells Like Teen Spirit. Shake me all night long with that.

5 #WeAreSpring, please. #WeAreWinter was a fantastic, empowering promo for the Canadian Olympic team during the Winter Olympics but that's over (and we did amazing!), yet the frigid temperatures still remain. I can speak for everyone when I say we are kinda getting sick of shovelling. So I propose it's time to bring out a #WeAreSpring campaign where we encourage Mother Nature to show us some heat! Bring it with that hashtag.

6 Coldplay. With no context, Coldplay released an eerie, frosty, dark new video titled Midnight this week that felt more like a Radiohead song. But dropping stuff with zero context is the new I'm-going-to-build-so-much-hype-behind-this-product-before-it's-released-you-won't-believe-it! So it makes total sense, actually.

7 Anchorman 2. On Feb. 28, Anchorman 2: The Legend Continues is being re-released in theatres for one week only with 763 new jokes. A movie that had so much improvisation had plenty to choose from and these new ones have risen from the cutting room floor. So now, watch out on social media as movie-goers tweet out their fave new Ron Burgundy lines.

8 Oscars. With the 86th Academy Awards Sunday night, the biggest social media action will be on what returning host Ellen has to say in her opening monologue, and what the stars are wearing on the red carpet. The actual awards are secondary — though if Barkhad Abdi from Captain Phillips doesn't win best actor in a supporting role, I'll be kicking up a Twitter storm.

Batman stars in new toy story

COURTESY FREYA JOBBINS

Dark Knight's head made of recyclables

It looks like Batman has gone all soft – he's made out of toys. Sculptor Freya Jobbins created this bust of the Caped Crusader using old figurines, with a baby doll belly as his chin. "My work explores the relationship between consumerist fetishism and the emerging recycling culture within the visual arts," says Jobbins. METRO

Artist's viewpoint

"I begin my work by finding toys in second-hand shops and recycling centres. As I build a base layer of toys and doll parts, the persona of the bust starts to evolve." Freya Jobbins

So many items

- "I love the actual process of hunting for the discarded toys, but to find so many of them unwanted, still in perfectly good condition, really shocks me," Jobbins said.

Seth Rogen and his partner-in-crime Evan Goldberg's next announced project is a movie version of Console Wars, an upcoming book about the knock-down, drag-out brawl between Sega and Nintendo of the '90s. But there's no need to wait for either to refresh your memories of a pixelated rivalry.

TORY WALKER/FLICKR

Nesbox:

Brush up on the Nintendo side of the war by browsing through a playable library of NES and SNES games that is hundreds deep. Classic RPGs, beat-em-up brawlers and patience-grinding platformers. Not to mention the mighty and beloved Earthbound. (nesbox.com)

Ssega:

Look, fan boys. It's quite easy to love the offerings of both companies. There's no need for rival camps. However, as you're working your way through proven classics like Aladdin, Beyond Oasis and Sonic Spinball (that's right, Spinball), you'll find we can all agree that most of the music was terrible. (ssega.com)

The Console Wars:

If the games themselves cause your eyes to glaze over, there's still a magnificent yarn full of insider intrigue, corporate betrayal and tumbles from the throne. The full book is a few weeks away from release, but Exposé has a pretty great primer that may pique your interest. (xmedia.ex.ac.uk)

Synopsis

Liam Neeson joins the mile-high club in Non-Stop. He plays Bill Marks, an aging U.S. federal air marshal safe-guarding the 150 passengers, including Julianne Moore, Corey Stoll, Linus Roache and flight attendant Lupita Nyong'o, on an international flight from New York to London. He's also a burn-out, a lonely guy with a loaded gun and a propensity to get loaded on booze. The routine flight becomes fraught with danger when he receives text messages from a mysterious source threatening to kill a passenger every 20 minutes unless a ransom of $150 million is deposited into a bank account. When that account is found to be in Marks's name, he's accused of being a hijacker.

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Liam Neeson takes his tough guy act in the air in Non-Stop. CONTRIBUTED

Just plane outrageous

Non-Stop. Liam Neeson's acting is the only thing that saves this from a crash landing

Richard: Mark, Non-Stop has more red herrings than a fish and chips shop. Clues are dropped and discarded and the plot is so ludicrous that every now and again someone has to say, "I can explain this," so the audience has a fighting chance of making some kind of sense of the intrigue. The story is simple but is muddied by outrageous twists. Once I decided to not try and play along — this isn't True Detective where every word and scene counts — I enjoyed watching Neeson in action man mode. He's better than the movie and he made this movie better.

Mark: Richard, I liked the movie in spite of itself. I did play along right to the end, and enjoyed the ride. But it's this Agatha Christie-like cheesiness that keeps threatening to sink the picture. And the answer to the movie's riddle was far from satisfying. It felt tacked on and graceless. Neeson is great, but he's getting old for this sort of thing. Soon he's going to chase the bad guys with a walker.

RC: You wouldn't say that if he was after you! Walker or no walker, the old boy has some life in him yet. There is a certain cheesy joy to be found in the image of Neeson floating in zero gravity, grabbing a gun out of the air and getting business done. He has carved a unique niche for himself and seems to be having fun growling his way through trashy action movies.

MB: And what about Julianne Moore? What's her excuse? Mortgage payments? She was actually the one passenger I didn't believe in for a moment. I kept thinking, "Why is Julianne Moore in this picture?' And like everyone else, she gets to do an emotional speech that proves she couldn't be the villain. Which, of course, may or may not be the case. I know you liked Neeson's zero gravity gun grab, but I also liked his fist fight in the airplane lavatory.

RC: I hope Moore buys something nice with the pay cheque. She gets the job done, but that part could have been played by anyone. I feel bad for Lupita Nyong'o. She's an Oscar nominee for 12 Years a Slave, but here she's reduced to a Grace Jones impersonator.

MB: Weirdly, I did not feel very emotionally involved with the movie. Maybe because so much of the plot depends on texting, or maybe because the characters keep yammering on, Non-Stop, about their backstory.

Drama

Stalingrad

Director. Fedor Bondarchuk

Stars. Thomas Kretschmann, Yanina Studilina

Stalingrad is an epic look at the battle that turned the tide of the Second World War. A band of determined Russian soldiers fight to hold a strategic building in their devastated city against a ruthless German army, and in the process become deeply connected to two Russian women who have been living there. Presented in IMAX 3D, the scale of the battle contrasts dramatically with the human drama.

Look picture-perfect on the red carpet

Life as an A-list actress. From finding the right dress to erasing wrinkles and losing those extra pounds, getting Oscar-ready is a months-long affair

JOHN MACKAY
For Metro Canada

Puffiness! Breakouts! Bulges! If these are the nightmares that A-list actresses have on the nights leading up to the Oscars, they can be forgiven. They're only going to be seen by ... oh ... several hundred million people in 225 countries. No surprise that weeks, if not months, go into getting Oscar ready. Here's how it happens.

First, amass the troops. Have wardrobe stylist, tailor, hair stylist, makeup artist, dermatologist, aesthetician, nutritionist, personal trainer, massage therapist, manicurist and, since this is Hollywood, psychotherapist, scheduled and at the ready.

"The prepping can start months before the awards," says celebrity hair and makeup artist Sheri Stroh. "They'll get rolling with a diet and exercise protocol and meet with their stylist, who starts looking for the perfect dress."

Dermatologists and aestheticians, always on speed dial, come next, to perfect skin that's likely near perfect to begin with. But there's collagen to stimulate, pores to shrink and wrinkles to erase. Microdermabrasion, oxygen facials, LED light treatments and more — those high-definition cameras are merciless. And your Botox can always use a top-up.

Two weeks prior, get your hair cut and coloured. And how's your dress coming along? "It has to be the perfect dress that defines the celebrity's style," explains L.A. stylist Alissia Marciano.

By now you've picked out your dress — and your backup dress — and you've had more than one fitting. "Remember," Marciano says, "it has to fit you like a glove." Time to begin your juice fast. And schedule your spray tan.

The day's arrived, but don't worry, this is the easy part. Already carb-free and as cleansed, toned and taut as those three months of daily workouts will allow, do a little yoga to relax and then greet your team at the door. Try on your dress one last time. The tailor will cut and reshape it and can always sew you into the dress if need be.

While security men deliver the diamonds, let your hair stylist, makeup artist and manicurist get to work.

What to eat today? Nothing! Well, maybe a little bowl of detox soup, but please, no salt or caffeine, you don't want to bloat — there's only so much Spanx can do.

Finally, it's 4:30 p.m. in L.A. and your car is here. You're dressed, accessorized and made up, waiting while your stylist scrapes the bottom of your shoes with a knife — those red carpets can be slippery.

Get into the car oh-so-carefully and sit very still on your drive to Hollywood's Dolby Theatre. But relax! You'll be on and off that 500 feet of red carpet before you know it.

The end of the annual film calendar is nearly upon us, with the 86th Academy Awards set for Sunday evening on CTV and CTV.ca. Here's a sample of what to expect on Hollywood's biggest night.

Did you know

- Meryl Streep's nod for best actress in August: Osage County marks her 18th Oscar nomination, breaking the record for most nominations earned by an actor or actress, previously held by ... Meryl Streep.
- If Jennifer Lawrence wins for best supporting actress in American Hustle she'll become the youngest person to win two acting Oscars. She'd also be the first actress to win back-to-back awards in different categories and with the same director.
- This year marks only the second time that Pixar has released a film (Monsters University) that hasn't earned a best animated picture nomination. The first was 2011's Cars 2.
- Best actor nominee Leonardo DiCaprio and best actress nominee Amy Adams are currently tied at five career nominations and zero wins each.
- With his nomination for The Book Thief's soundtrack, John Williams extends his ridiculous lead as the living person with the most Oscar nods, at 49. If you factor in the deceased, he's catching up to 60-time nominee Walt Disney.
- Frozen composer Bobby Lopez, one of the songwriters nominated for best song favourite Let It Go, would become the 12th person in show business history to achieve the EGOT — winning an Emmy, a Grammy, an Oscar and a Tony.
- Ellen DeGeneres reprises her role as the ceremony's host, following her last turn at the gig in 2007. She's got a long way to go to get into the record books though, as Bob Hope holds the lead with 19 hosting appearances.

Your guide to the Oscars

86th Academy Awards. Here's what to look out for during Sunday's ceremony, hosted by Ellen DeGeneres

Returning producers Neil Meron and Craig Zadan say the theme for this year's Oscars is a salute to heroes and heroines of all stripes, celebrating everything from Norma Rae and Captain Phillips to Harry Potter and the Ghostbusters. There will also be a segment celebrating the 75th anniversary of the Wizard of Oz.

Music will be a big part of the ceremony, which is great considering so many big names are nominated in the best song category and performances of the nominated songs were skipped altogether in 2010 and 2012.

U2 (Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom), Pharrell Williams (Despicable Me 2), Karen O (Her) and Idina Menzel (Frozen) will all take the stage, as will Pink and Bette Midler for other performances.

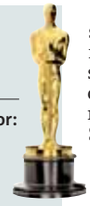
But host DeGeneres has already insisted that she herself won't be singing, unlike last year's host, Seth MacFarlane.

With 46 famous faces presenting over the course of the night, it's going to be a busy stage. Presenters include previous winners like Jennifer Lawrence, Christoph Waltz, Kevin Spacey and Angelina Jolie, plus popular names like Zac Efron, Channing Tatum and Kristen Bell. One we're definitely excited about is Vertigo star Kim Novak, making a rare public appearance at the ceremony.

This marks the 13th year the Oscars have been presented in the same venue, though the name has changed. What was the Kodak Theatre up until 2011 is now known as the Dolby Theatre.

And if the ceremony feels long, just be thankful it's not 2000 anymore. That year, the proceedings clocked in at a whopping four hours and four minutes, while they generally average around three-and-a-half hours long. The first Oscars in 1929, by the way, lasted 15 minutes. If only.

Last-minute predictions



We're going ahead and calling most of the races all locked up, but there is still room for surprises. Best supporting actress and best picture seem particularly hard to pin down. But we're pinning them down anyway! If you win your office pool with this, we get a cut, OK?

- Best Picture: 12 Years a Slave
- Best Director: Alfonso Cuarón, Gravity
- Best Actor: Matthew McConaughey, Dallas Buyers Club
- Best Actress: Cate Blanchett, Blue Jasmine
- Best Supporting Actor: Jared Leto, Dallas Buyers Club

A few good reads

The books behind the films

If you're looking for some good reading material, the Academy's best adapted screenplay category is a good place to start, but you'll be searching bookstores in vain for the book behind Before Midnight. The screenplay for the movie is an adaptation because it's based on the characters from previous films Before Sunrise and Before Sunset. Still, you can always cozy up with these:

• A Captain's Duty: Somali Pirates, Navy SEALs and Dangerous Days at Sea, the book by Richard Phillips (with co-writer Stephan Talty) became Captain Phillips, with Tom Hanks stepping in to portray Phillips' hijacking by Somali pirates.

• The Lost Child of Philomena Lee by Martin Sixsmith obviously became Philomena, starring Dame Judi Dench as Lee and Steve Coogan as former BBC presenter Sixsmith.

• 12 Years a Slave, the harrowing 1853 memoir of Solomon Northup, was originally published with the subtitle "Narrative of Solomon Northup, citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington city in 1841, rescued in 1853 from a cotton plantation near the Red River in Louisiana," which, honestly, is a total spoiler.

• Reading Jordan Belfort's own accounts of his exploits in the memoir The Wolf of Wall Street might help illuminate why the film's chronicle of bad behavior seemed so infatuated with its subject, who earned a tidy $1 million for the movie rights.

• Over in the best documentary category, you can pick up Jeremy Scahill's Dirty Wars: The World is a Battlefield if you want to learn more about the nominated film Dirty Wars.

And the Oscar for best cocktail goes to ...

It's an unusually crowded field for this year's best picture contest, but thankfully our vice isn't gambling. Instead, we raise a glass to three of our favourite 2013 nominees. Serve these and everyone goes home a winner!

TEXT BY JOE HOWELL, PHOTOGRAPHY BY JOANNA BALCERAK

I'm the Captain Now

- 1 oz Captain Morgan Dark Rum
- 1 oz Sailor Jerry Spiced Navy Rum
- 4 oz ginger beer
- 3 lime wedges
- 2 dashes Angostura Bitters

Build in a Collins glass with ice.

We salute Captain Phillips with this take on a seaworthy classic, the Dark 'n' Stormy. Originally just rum and ginger beer, the drink hails from the heyday of the Royal Navy, when sailors got a daily ration of rum and the Navy opened a ginger beer plant in Bermuda, purportedly to wean those same sailors off the hard stuff. Of course, the scallywags just combined the two instead.

The Russian Satellite

- 1.5 oz Stolichnaya Vodka
- .75 oz Kahlúa
- .25 oz pure lemon juice
- 2 dashes Bittermens Xocolatl Mole Bitters
- 1 dash Fernet Branca
- White tapioca pearls

Shake and strain into a brandy snifter, pack with ice, and scatter pearls on top.

The famous Black Russian — simply vodka and Kahlúa — is older than the space station Mir before they finally decommissioned the space wreck. In this twist we hail Gravity: the cocktail is still sweet and likeable, but thanks to the lemon and Fernet has a bit of edge, like George Clooney in pretty much all his roles.

The Bamboozeler

- 1.5 oz pineapple juice
- 1 oz coconut cream
- .75 oz Appleton VX
- .75 oz Malibu Rum
- 75 oz Blue Curaçao
- .50 oz lime juice

Shake hard with ice and strain into a stemmed martini glass. Garnish with a homemade cocktail umbrella.

"I don't care, I break the rules," says Bradley Cooper in American Hustle. With its neon hue and garish garnish, this libation definitely disregards modern cocktail conventions. But in the era of Hustle, sexy, gaudy drinks were de rigueur.

The man behind The Lion King looks at the dog life

Mr. Peabody & Sherman hits theatres next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

Mr. Peabody & Sherman. Rob Minkoff brings back a beagle he loved as a child and makes a smart, funny film in the process

Quoted

Director Rob Minkoff on making a film based on Peabody's Improbable History

scene@metronews.ca

Rob Minkoff may always be best known as the co-director of The Lion King, one of the biggest animated hits of all time, but long before he brought Simba, Mufasa and Scar to life, he was a fan of a dog named Mr. Peabody.

Mr. Peabody is a beagle in the world of humans — imagine Family Guy's Brian with less attitude but more PhDs. He's a Harvard grad, a Nobel Prize winner, advisor to heads of state and in his spare time he invented planking and auto tune.

With his adopted human son Sherman, he's also a time traveller, taking the WABAC machine — "It's not WHERE we're going, but WHEN!" — to various spots in history in a weekly segment on the show Rocky and His Friends called Peabody's Improbable History.

"Whenever it came on, I would watch it," says Minkoff, director of the new animated film Mr. Peabody & Sherman, "so I've seen all the episodes multiple times.

"I was always a fan but I don't recall thinking, 'Oh, that would make a great movie one day.' It didn't occur to me that way. It all started 12 years ago with a conversation I had with (executive producer) Jason Clark. He came to me and said, 'What do you think of Mr. Peabody and Sherman?' My answer was, 'I love them.' He said, 'What about making a movie out of them.' I thought, 'They're great characters. There's a lot to them. There is an unexplored well of stuff, like the time machine and time travel.'"

That was 12 years ago. "Once you get your teeth into something creatively," he says, "you never really let go."

Over the years the idea for the film has shifted and changed. At the very early stages it was suggested that the movie could work as a live action story.

"It didn't take very long for me to come around to the idea that I would prefer to do this as an animated movie because I didn't understand how it would work as a live action thing. It would lose some of its appeal, some of the quirkiness of it."

The film retains the eccentricity of the original series: It's probably the only kid's movie with an Oedipal joke. But Minkoff hopes the movie will appeal to all ages.

"The original show was always popular among college educated, smarter people, and that was something we thought was important but at the same time, we wanted to) make it kid friendly.

"I didn't want to copy (the TV show) exactly because I couldn't possibly do that. So it was taking the spirit of it and letting that be. Trying to get to the core of what it is rather than the surface."

This band of jet-setters is on fire

Haiti to Hollywood.
Worlds clash for Arcade Fire as band prepares for 'mind blow' at Oscars

Win and Will Butler of Arcade Fire aren't your average brothers.

Sure, they spent their youngest years at odds, as brothers will. But early on they discovered something that would inform the rest of their lives as creative partners at the heart of one of rock 'n' roll's most creative and single-minded bands.

"I left the house when I was 15 to go to boarding school and would come back in the summers, and I started to realize he's the only person I related to in the whole everywhere," Win Butler, 33, said. "There's not too many people in the world where you literally have the exact same influences, so we kind of developed this language to work together where it's really easy."

"That doesn't mean we see everything identically," Will Butler, 31, said. "But it means that, certainly in artistic endeavours, there's a bit more empathy and compassion for each other because we see where they're coming from. And we tend to agree more than two random musicians would."

Arcade Fire is heading to Los Angeles in time for the Academy Awards, where band member Will Butler and frequent Arcade Fire collaborator Owen Pallett will be up for a best original score Oscar. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

That relationship is at the heart of Arcade Fire's success and creativity, something that is on full display this week as the Grammy Award-winning group flies from one end of the continent to the other, and back. In the space of three weeks, Arcade Fire members will have played in a Mardi Gras parade while in New Orleans, played The Tonight Show, performed in Haiti, and then returned home to Montreal for two days to pack for a trip to Los Angeles and the Academy Awards, where Will Butler is up for best original score for his work with Owen Pallett on Her.

"Normally when I come back from Haiti, I just look at all the power lines and streets and road signs and I'm just, 'Wow, look at all this infrastructure,'" Win Butler said. "I'm kind of in a daze the first couple of days when I get back to North America. But going from Haiti to the belly of the beast (at the Oscars) is going to be something of a mind blow."

After the show, the group flies directly to Louisville, Ky., for rehearsals and the launch of a summer-long North American tour, interspersed with European festival dates. Add to the hectic mix the birth of a son to Win Butler and his wife and bandmate Régine Chassagne.

The intense workload since the six-piece began recording Reflektor last year has required the kind of teamwork the brothers and their band have perfected since Will and Win began writing songs together growing up near Houston.

The band worked on Reflektor, the follow-up to the 2010 Grammy album of the year The Suburbs, and Spike Jonze's best-picture-nominated film in parallel fashion. The album even contains a song proposed for the score that didn't make the film. They recorded Reflektor with James Murphy of LCD Soundsystem and Markus Dravs serving as producers, delivering an unpredictable but completely danceable record full of Haitian-influenced rhythms and reflective lyrics.

As both projects came to a simultaneous conclusion, Will Butler took over supervisory duties on the score, working with Jonze and the band's frequent collaborator Owen Pallett. In one case the band was working together toward a shared vision. In the other, they were a contractor trying to match Jonze's needs.

"So that was very, very different," Will Butler said. "There's a lot less drums and a lot less vocals on the soundtrack. And our band is very good at drums and vocals."

The return of Pinkman?
Aaron Paul wants in for Breaking Bad spin-off

Aaron Paul, right, and Vince Gilligan may be teaming up again. INVISION

If Aaron Paul gets his way, Breaking Bad fans can expect to see Jesse Pinkman calling on Saul Goodman — and perhaps calling him some names — in the spinoff series centred on the sleazy lawyer.

Paul says he'd had "serious talks" with Better Call Saul co-creator Vince Gilligan about returning to his character, who was a low-level drug dealer before he linked up with Bryan Cranston's Walter White to produce methamphetamine.

"Anything Vince is involved with, I'm there," Paul said in an interview while promoting the upcoming Need For Speed movie. "I owe him my entire career. And the idea of jumping into the skin of Jesse Pinkman again in his lighter days, because it's all a prequel, it would be fun."

The Emmy-winning Breaking Bad ended last year after five seasons. Gilligan told reporters last month that he'd be asking its actors to make cameos in Better Call Saul, which will star Bob Odenkirk and is set to premiere in November on AMC.

It's unclear if Cranston will make an appearance. One actor who definitely won't be involved is Dean Norris, who played White's DEA agent brother-in-law Hank Schrader. Norris is starring in the series Under the Dome, set to premiere its second season on CBS this summer.

"I don't think they'll let me do a little cable show," he said in an interview this week while promoting the film Small Time. "I think that experience was that experience. I'm not a big fan of kind of revisiting something that has already been done. But I think it's going to be awesome. So I can't wait to see it." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian Screen Awards

Cronenberg to be honoured with lifetime award

Jessica Pare, Jay Baruchel and Serena Ryder are among the homegrown celebrities set to appear as presenters at the Canadian Screen Awards. CBC-TV says Baruchel will be part of the tribute to filmmaker David Cronenberg for the director's lifetime achievement award. Baruchel co-starred in Cronenberg's 2012 drama Cosmopolis. The award itself will be presented by Cronenberg's long-time collaborator, actor Viggo Mortensen.

The Canadian Screen Awards celebrate the best in Canadian film, television and digital media. The cloning saga Orphan Black leads the TV nominees while Denis Villeneuve's surreal mind-bender Enemy tops the film contenders. Veteran actor Martin Short will again be host the awards.

The two-hour broadcast gala airs March 9 on CBC-TV. Previously announced guests include comic Dave Foley from the upcoming CTV sitcom Spun Out, Tatiana Maslany of Space's Orphan Black and Shay Mitchell of M3's Pretty Little Liars. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Girls star Driver tipped to play new Stars Wars VII villain

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Some days, it's good to have a face like a handsome alien. Adam Driver, the Girls star who looks like the love child of sexy and weird, is putting those unconventional good looks to excellent use: He's close to signing a deal to play a villain in the upcoming Star Wars: Episode VII, according to Variety. Sources say his character will be in the vein of Darth Vader.

Apparently, the only holdup was his Girls shooting schedule, but surely Hannah and Marnie's Brooklynite fretting is no match for the power of the Force. Although breathless casting rumours have swirled around just about every Hollywood male since the J.J. Abrams-directed reboot was announced, nothing has been confirmed yet, including for Driver — not by the Star Wars people, anyhow. Driver's co-star and boss Lena Dunham seems pretty sure he's got the job. "We're VERY proud of Adam Driver re: Star Wars. He's about to rip a hole in da force. Is that a thing? I guess I should see those movies?" she tweeted on Feb. 26.

David Arquette

Arquette wants son to be a space cadet, but that doesn't fly with mom-to-be

There's one name David Arquette's expectant girlfriend will not allow for their baby boy: Astro. Arquette and TV personality Christina McLarty have a baby due in May, and the actor offered up his choice of name, only to have it dismissed.

"I did want to name him Astro," Arquette said in a recent interview. The actor said he thought Astro Arquette was an amazing name. But, he said, it just "didn't fly" with McLarty. Arquette said his 10-year-old daughter Coco — with ex-wife Courtney Cox — is excited about the arrival of her baby brother. The actor said the one thing Coco is insisting is that the baby "absolutely worships" her. He also said his daughter is already poised to follow in his parents' show business footsteps. "Coco loves acting herself and she loves the fact that we do what we do," said Arquette, who also pointed out that his daughter loves singing. "So, I think she's pretty much exactly how all of us on my side of the family were raised: in it essentially."

David Arquette spoke while promoting his TV movie Happy Face Killer about the hunt and capture of Canadian serial killer Keith Jesperson that airs on the Lifetime network on March 1.

Rihanna's flirty ways keep Drake and Brown guessing — and love triangle intact

Everything old is new again, including the R&B love triangle that is Rihanna, Drake and Chris Brown. Rihanna recently enjoyed a Paris outing with the Canadian rapper, who traded blows with Brown at a New York club in 2012 over what was said to be an argument about her. And Rihanna has reportedly been exchanging text messages with ex-boyfriend Brown, who is still on probation for assaulting her five years ago, according to the NY Post. "Chris started texting Rihanna on her birthday (on Feb. 20), and the two have been sending each other a flurry of texts ever since," a source says. "Friends are freaked out that she's going to start dating him again."

No Patton the back for Thicke after MTV grind

There was plenty of outrage about Robin Thicke and Miley Cyrus' aggressively sexual routine at the MTV Video Music Awards back in August, and apparently Paula Patton was among those put off by the grinding and gyrating.

A source tells Us Weekly that the risqué performance left Patton feeling "utterly disrespected" and was a key factor in her decision to separate from Thicke after nine years of marriage. In fact, the pair reportedly got into a screaming match over the stunt.

And while Patton laughed off the incident in interviews, it was apparently only because of Thicke's pleading. "He asked her to help him out as a friend and a wife, and defend him and the performance," a source says.

Who's least likely to enter an Oscars pool? His Holiness the Dalai Lama

Sorry, Hollywood, but the Dalai Lama won't be watching you celebrate at the Academy Awards this weekend. The Tibetan spiritual leader admits to the Huffington Post that he hasn't watched a Hollywood film in a long, long time. "In the early period, yes, I watched films. Over the last 20 years, not much," he says. "Looking at the television, like that, I think it's really bad for my eyes. And also, it's a waste of time."

DON'T LET COLD OR FLU SLOW YOU DOWN

HOW TO SAFEGUARD YOUR FAMILY

Sneezes, sniffles, or coughing fits can put a serious wrench into daily life.

Do you know the best ways to help prevent the flu? This year, help safeguard your family against illnesses with the following tips for cold and flu season.

BOOST YOUR IMMUNE SYSTEM

A healthy immune system is the best protection against cold and flu season. Keep your family's natural defences strong with these simple tactics:

• Avoid stress. Studies show that stress hampers your ability to stay healthy, especially during cold and flu season, so anything you can do to combat stress helps fight germs. Try taking a mini meditation break during the day — simply close your eyes and focus on breathing in and out for a few minutes.

• Get plenty of sleep. When you consistently log eight hours of sleep a night, your body has the chance to repair cells and build up your immune system.

• Eat right and exercise. Stock up on fruits and vegetables to give your body the nutrients it needs. Also, shoot for 30 minutes of moderate activity at least three times a week.

• Get a flu shot. Think of it as your secret weapon during flu season. It's approved for almost everyone older than 6six months. Consult your doctor to see if the whole family should be vaccinated.

FIGHT GERMS

When you keep germs away during cold and flu season, you can lower your odds of getting sick. Try these simple habits to help avoid stuffy noses and sore throats:

• Wash your hands. And talk to your children about why it's important to wash theirs. A typical hand washing — before a meal, after going to the bathroom, or anytime you cough, sneeze, or blow your nose — should last 20 seconds. It's roughly the time it takes to sing Happy Birthday twice in your head.

• Bring backup. Try sticking a bottle of hand sanitizer in your purse to fight germs when you are on the go.

• Clean your desk. It's a hot spot for germs at the office. Invest in some disinfectant wipes and clean your desk, keyboard, mouse, and phone frequently.

BE PREPARED FOR COLD AND FLU SYMPTOMS

Despite your best efforts, it can be tough to make it through cold and flu season without anyone in the family getting sick. Stock up on the essentials such as Vicks® NyQuil®, Vicks VapoDrops™, and Puffs Plus® with the Scent of Vicks.

Liquid Assets

The best wine goes to...

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

For the first time in years I can say I've seen most of the movies nominated for the Best Picture Oscar. Sadly, not one of them speaks to the wine community.

It looks like I'll have to wait until The Billionaire's Vinegar, the story of the world's most expensive bottle of wine, hits theatres. Brad Pitt is set to star.

If you're wondering what my favourite wine movies are, here are my top picks:

Sideways: The brilliant Academy Award winner that made pinot noir a superstar.

Bottle Shock: Upstart Americans take on the French in a sniff, swirl and spit contest that ... well, I won't ruin the ending.

A Good Year: Russell Crowe inherits a French winery in Provence and his ego gets crushed just like his grapes.

Somm: A doc that will have you shedding a tear at the trials and tribulations of becoming a sommelier.

For me, the Oscars are an appetizer event and the refreshing varietal fruit of the Fat Bastard 2012 Chardonnay ($13.46 - $15.99) makes for a food-friendly date to the big show. PRICES REFLECT RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

1. Preheat oven to 140 C (275 F).

2. Place the lamb, vinegar, stock, rosemary, garlic and sugar in a deep baking dish and cover with a tight-fitting lid. Bake for 3 hours.

3. Turn lamb and bake further 2 hours. Remove the lid, increase temperature to 180 C (350 F) and bake for 30 minutes or until the lamb has browned.

Ingredients

- 1 kg lamb shoulder, on the bone
- 1 1/3 cups (310 ml) balsamic vinegar
- 3 cups (750 ml) chicken stock
- 6 sprigs rosemary
- 8 cloves garlic
- 2 tbsp brown sugar

- 1 1/4 cups (275 g) caster (superfine) sugar
- 3/4 cup (75 g) cocoa
- 1 tsp vanilla extract
- 3 eggs
- 1/2 cup (75 g) plain (all-purpose) flour

Preheat oven to 160 C (325 F).

Place the butter, sugar and cocoa in a saucepan over low heat and stir until the butter has melted. Spoon into a bowl and add the vanilla and eggs, whisking well.

Sift the flour over the mixture and whisk to combine.

Spoon the mixture into a 20 cm-square cake tin lined with non-stick baking paper.

Bake for 30–35 minutes or until centre is just set. Cool in tin and cut into squares to serve. Makes 16. DONNA HAY, GUSTOTV.COM

Lunch. Caramelized Onion, Gorgonzola and Pumpkin Galette

Ingredients

- 450 g pumpkin, peeled and chopped
- 500 g store-bought short crust pastry
- 3/4 cup (240 g) store-bought caramelized onion relish
- 150 g gorgonzola, chopped
- sea salt and cracked pepper
- 16 sage leaves

1. Preheat oven to 200 C (400 F).

2. Steam the pumpkin until almost tender. Set aside to cool.

3. Divide pastry in half and roll each piece between 2 sheets of non-stick baking paper to a rough, 5 mm-thick round shape.

4. Line 2 baking trays with non-stick baking paper and place a pastry round on each. Top each pastry with the caramelized onion, leaving a 5 cm border. Sprinkle with Gorgonzola.

5. Place pumpkin onto galettes, sprinkle with salt and pepper and top with sage. Fold in the pastry to make a rough border. Bake 25 minutes or until pastry is golden and crisp and the pumpkin is soft.

International Women's Day

Date: Mar. 8
Location: Everywhere

We're not sure why this isn't every day. More attention needs to be paid to promoting gender equality and women's empowerment both within Canada and around the world. Check out internationalwomensday.com and search Toronto to discover all the events leading up to the Saturday celebration. Get involved.

If Walls Could Talk

Date: Mar. 6
Location:
The Gladstone Hotel

The Gladstone Hotel and curator Leila Courey are hosting the juried exhibition If Walls Could Talk. This collection of experiential illustration features work by both emerging and established artists and will alter the hotel's second floor gallery and public spaces in dramatic, conceptual, and experimental ways. So, basically the hotel will drop LSD for 10 days so you can go get high on art.

Canadian Stage Theatre Ball

Date: Mar. 6
Location: The Carlu

The Canadian Stage 2014 Theatre Ball gala fundraiser, Shatter, will be a glamorous evening of drinking and dancing. But don't worry, if you've got two left feet there will also be plenty of eating and entertainment at the event. You'll be mingling with over 400 prominent guests including senior execs from some of Canada's major corporations.

SNAP 2014 Annual Gala and Photography Auction

Date: Mar. 6
Location: 571
Adelaide St. E.

The AIDS Committee of Toronto (ACT) is throwing their annual photographic fundraiser, SNAP! This is an opportunity to directly support ACT's programs and services and increase awareness of HIV-AIDS all the while adding to your art collection. There will be both a live art auction and a silent one, as well as a digital photo competition.

Toronto

Date: Mar. 6
Location: GTA

This great city of ours is turning 180 years young! That's right, it's been nearly two centuries since we decided to ditch York and rename ourselves Toronto. There will be lots of events going on to celebrate the occasion, including a semi-formal cocktail affair hosted by Happy Birthday Toronto held at the historic John St. Roundhouse. We're a world-class city, so let's show everyone what a world-class party looks like.

Imagine Dragons

Date: Mar. 4
Location: ACC

Billboard named these guys The Breakthrough Band of 2013 while Rolling Stone named their single Radioactive 'the biggest rock hit of the year.' So yeah, Imagine Dragons — so hot right now. Fresh off a Grammy for 'best rock performance' and an appearance on SNL, we're pretty sure these guys will put on a show to remember. This is your chance to see a band at the beginning of a long rise — welcome to the new age.

Spring training.
Bautista perfect at the plate through two games against Phillies

Jose Bautista kept up his torrid start to the spring, hitting two doubles and driving in two runs Thursday, powering the Toronto Blue Jays past the Philadelphia Phillies 7-5 in Dunedin, Fla.

A day after hitting a long home run against the Phillies in his first at-bat of exhibition play, Bautista had an RBI double in the first inning off Philadelphia ace Cliff Lee. Bautista finished 2-for-2 with a walk. The two-time major-league home run champion missed the final six weeks last year because of a hip injury.

Jose Reyes, Brett Lawrie and Melky Cabrera also drove in runs for Toronto.

Philadelphia's offence was powered by a pair of home runs from bench hopefuls: Darin Ruf hit a two-run shot in the third and John Mayberry Jr. had a solo drive in the sixth. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TFC transfer could hurt Defoe's World Cup status

Jermain Defoe retained his place in the England squad for the friendly against Denmark despite his impending move to Canada, but playing in MLS might harm his chances of making the World Cup.

Jermain Defoe GETTY IMAGES

Defoe, who has 19 goals in 55 England games, has appeared in only two Tottenham games in two months as he prepares to head to Toronto FC for the start of MLS next month.

"You can't deny of course that playing for Toronto can't be put on a par with playing in the Premier League — nobody would expect me to say that," England coach Roy Hodgson said on Thursday. "And all these factors will be taken into consideration when we make a (squad) decision."

But Hodgson stressed that playing for TFC "won't necessarily count against" the striker if his scoring touch also travels with him. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nets' Collins finding grace under pressure

NBA. Brooklyn centre wearing jersey in honour of slain gay college student

Brooklyn Nets centre Jason Collins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deron Williams took a moment to snap a few photos of Brooklyn teammate Jason Collins at their shootaround in Portland.

He couldn't help it: The NBA's first openly gay player was surrounded by a throng of cameras and microphones, and at least for the next week or so, Collins will be the face of the Nets wherever they go.

The seven-footer was signed to a 10-day contract on Sunday. He played in a 108-102 victory over the Lakers that night, with two rebounds, five fouls and a steal in just under 11 minutes.

Before Wednesday night's game against the Trail Blazers, Collins said he accepted both the interest and scrutiny that has come with his return to the league.

"I'm back playing basketball, so of course I'm enjoying this," he said.

The Nets visited Denver Thursday night, where the family of slain Wyoming college student Matthew Shepard were expected to make the drive for the game against the Nuggets.

Shepard was tortured and murdered in 1998 because he was gay. Collins wears his No. 98 jersey in Shepard's honour. He wants to keep the details of any meeting with Judy Shepard to himself.

"Obviously, it's extremely special and I'm very much looking forward to meeting them," he said.

Collins wore the No. 98 with both the Boston Celtics and the Washington Wizards for Shepard even before coming out.

"We were very touched," Judy Shepard told the New York Daily News about the jersey. "For him to make that tribute to Matt was meaningful to us."

The jersey was already the biggest seller of the day Tuesday on NBAStore.com, and the NBA said it was selling well again Wednesday. The league didn't provide the number of jerseys sold.

Collins publicly announced he was gay last May, and he joins several other athletes to come out, including Robbie Roberts of Major League Soccer's Los Angeles Galaxy, Brittney Griner of the WNBA's Phoenix Mercury, and NFL draft hopeful Michael Sam, an All-American defensive end who played at Missouri.

Bertuzzi trial

Moore's lawyer calls for McCaw's testimony

The former owner of the Vancouver Canucks should be forced to answer, in front of a jury, if he approved a career-ending sucker punch on Steve Moore, a lawyer for the former NHL player argued in court Thursday.

It's now 10 years after Todd Bertuzzi's infamous hit, and Moore's multi-million-dollar lawsuit is finally approaching a trial.

Moore's lawyer, Tim Danson, is asking the Ontario Superior Court to compel John McCaw Jr., who is based in Seattle, to testify in Toronto.

Master Ronald Dash, who is hearing the motion, said he would not order McCaw to testify in person at the trial, slated to begin in September, but is considering Danson's alternate request that McCaw testify via video conference.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
As mind planet Mercury moves in your favour again today your attitude will change for the better and you will be more upbeat about your hopes. Anything is possible if you want it enough.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Keep telling yourself that you have what it takes. If you say it enough, you will start to believe it and when that happens, all sorts of doors will suddenly open to you.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
If you have something to say you know isn't going to please some people, say it now. Don't worry about the consequences. Your job is to call it as you see it, and you see more clearly than most.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Be on the lookout for money-making opportunities but don't go rushing after them the moment you spot them. As Mercury, planet of intellect and communication, turns direct again today you can afford to take your time.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
A loved one will speak their mind today and what they have to say will shock you. You never realized they could be so passionate, or so angry. Well, now you know, so what are you going to do about it?

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
As of today you should find it easier to organize your daily routine and either get rid of or delegate jobs that take up a great deal of your time for very little in the way of rewards.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
News you receive from afar will make you realize that what you've been worrying about in recent weeks is of no real importance. Creatively and romantically, seize the initiative and make things happen.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
It may annoy you that someone is saying untrue things. But the best approach is to pretend that you have not noticed and that you agree with every word they say. Then prove them wrong.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Now that Mercury, planet of communication, is moving in your favour again, you will find it easy to express yourself. But don't let everyone know what is going on in your head.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
What seems extraordinary to you may be an everyday occurrence to other people, so let your mind be open to all possibilities. It doesn't, of course, mean you have to agree with them.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Any self-doubts you have will start to fade today and with luck will be swept away by tomorrow's new moon. People expect you to be positive in your views and don't want to disappoint them.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Mercury ends its retrograde phase and your self-belief will soar. With a new moon and a wonderful Sun-Jupiter link over the next 48 hours, this could be one of the best weekends of the year. SALLY BROMPTON
